

Custom-made cable tray company for computer rooms

AI Overview

Top cable tray manufacturers for computer rooms include Basor, Tripp Lite, TechLine, and Atkore International, offering solutions for fiber optic, network, and auxiliary cabling. Leading Manufacturers and Their Offerings Basor Electric specializes in cable ladder runways and fiber optic cable management systems designed for data centers and equipment rooms. Their products provide physical protection, bend radius management, and modular solutions for high-density IT environments, ensuring reliable signal quality and adaptability to evolving technologies. Tripp Lite offers wire mesh cable tray systems suitable for server rooms and IT environments. These trays accommodate copper network cables, A/V cables, and lightweight bundles, reducing clutter while promoting airflow and easy installation. TechLine Manufacturing provides Snap Track® ventilated channel cable trays for auxiliary and support systems in data centers. These are ideal for HVAC controls, fire suppression wiring, building management systems, and retrofit projects, offering fast installation and cost-effective routing for non-IT cabling. Atkore International manufactures a wide range of cable trays and infrastructure products, including stainless steel and galvanized options. They cater to both standard and custom requirements, supporting industrial and IT applications globally.

Key Considerations for Computer Room Cable Trays

Material and Finish: Galvanized steel, stainless steel, and halogen-free plastics are common for durability and safety.

Tray Type: Ladder, wire mesh, and ventilated channel trays are preferred for airflow and heat dissipation in server rooms.

Installation Flexibility: Ceiling-mounted, under-desk, or wall-mounted trays allow scalable and modular deployment.

Compliance: Ensure trays meet NEC standards and UL certifications for electrical safety.

Capacity and Airflow: Open desi...
