

Distribution Network Automation Upgrade Company

AI Overview

Leading companies for distribution network automation upgrades include Ensto, Trilliant, and Itron, offering solutions to enhance grid reliability, automation, and real-time monitoring. Key Companies and Solutions Ensto provides distribution automation solutions that improve the quality, reliability, sustainability, and cybersecurity of low and medium voltage networks. Their offerings include line and cable accessories, intelligent substation solutions, and protection devices such as arc flash protection systems. Ensto supports utilities with end-to-end services from design to onsite testing and maintenance, ensuring uninterrupted electricity distribution in both overhead and underground networks. Trilliant offers a Distribution Automation (DA) platform that enables utilities to modernize their networks with real-time power quality insights, automated control, and flexible integration with OMS and DMS systems. Trilliant DA allows utilities to automate grid operations, enhance reliability, optimize resources, and maintain visibility during outages. It is designed to move utilities from simple monitoring to active, automated control, improving operational efficiency and network resilience. Itron provides intelligent communication solutions for secure, system-wide distribution automation. Their platform supports voltage control, conservation voltage regulation, and DER integration. Itron's DA solutions leverage Gen5 mesh networks and public or private cellular networks to ensure reliable communications and endpoint connectivity. Utilities like ComEd and Florida Power and Light have implemented Itron's solutions to enhance grid monitoring, fault detection, and service restoration. Benefits of Distribution Network Automation Upgrades Improved Reliability: Reduces frequency and duration of outages, enhancing SAIDI and SAIFI indices. Operational Efficiency: Automates routine processes...
